

Where did you get your compassion?

Things like love, self-sacrifice, mercy, compassion — where do these come from? If we're merely products of physical evolution, "survival of the fittest," why would we care about one another? And how do we explain a predominant law in the conscience of most people that says certain acts — child abuse, rape, murder, theft — are wrong?

Isn't it possible our conscience comes from a God who cares about the decisions and actions of humanity? A God who's much more than a vague, generic life force? To see some inspiring evidence for the existence of a loving Creator whom you can know personally, see the feature article "Is There A God?" at www.EveryStudent.com.
