

Handling life can be tough enough. How do you handle death?

There's never an acceptable way for someone to lose their life. It's always tragic. Everyone is acutely aware of the potential of that life and the value of the years that were lived. How does one deal with the grief, the seeming pointlessness of it all?

A college student named Steve Sawyer once had to deal not with another's death, but with the imminent end of his own life. Steve was a hemophiliac who found out during his sophomore year that he had contracted HIV and hepatitis from unscreened blood transfusions. Yet he lived his last few years with great hope and fulfillment.

How? Find out in his own words. His story will possibly give you a new perspective on life. See the feature article "Living with Hope" on the Web at www.EveryStudent.com.
